Part 1: An in vitro study of radiodentine. The aim of this study was to evaluate the efficacy of treatment with a bleaching agent (Aqua Z-Out) in the dissolution of an amalgam block preparation. A newly developed radiodentine formulation was used. In this in vitro study, the pulp chamber of six radiodentine discs were filled with amalgam block powder, subsequently covered with radiodentine and compacted with a hammer. Six samples without pulp exposure were used as controls. The samples were immersed in water for 21 days. The entire specimens were sectioned in the centre. One half was fixed in paraformaldehyde and embedded f678ea9f9e
